What is NFSUN 2008?

NFSUN (Nordisk forskersymposium om naturfagundervisning) is a Nordic Research Symposium on science education. The symposium offers a combination of PhD workshops, lectures, excursions and discussion groups. In addition there is a one day conference for Icelandic teachers prior to the symposium.

Our attendees include everyone from professors and curriculum developers to teacher researchers designing and developing the latest innovations in science education. Our speakers and workshop leaders are some of the biggest names in science education research today.

NFSUN is now held for the ninth time. The organizing committee is looking forward to welcoming over 450 attendees to the Iceland University of Education. The conference is very popular. This year authors from 15 countries have sent in proposals for the symposium program. The topic for 2008 is “From insight to learning to pedagogical practices.” NFSUN 2008, including the Icelandic conference, takes place from 10th -15th June.
